NEUROLOGY IN LITERATURE

Doctors’ writing, and writings

The quality of doctors’ writing has long been the object of some doctors’ humour. I suspect that doctors, just as novelists, can suffer from writer’s block although in the case of the medical profession more perhaps from lack of time rather than from a failure of inspiration. Which explanation applies to Ovid Vere, in Heart and science, is not entirely clear. Thomas Mann’s encyclopaedia is one I have tried to emulate but as yet with no success in finding a willing publisher!

Samuel Johnson, 1779, Lives of the English poets—Dryden

It is a rare kind of giblet porridge, made of the giblets of a couple of young geese, stogged full of meetors, orbs, spheres, track, hideous draughts, dark characters, white forms, and radiant lights, designed not only to please appetite, and indulge luxury; but it is also physical, being an approved medicine to purge choleric: for it is propounded by Morens, as a receipt to cure their fathers of their choleric humours: and were it written in characters of barbarous the words, might very well pass for a doctor’s bill.

Gustave Flaubert, 1856–7, Madam Bovary

Emma looked at him and shrugged her shoulders. Why hadn’t she at any rate one of those silent, earnest husbands who work at their books all night—and end up, by the time that rheumatism sets in at sixty, wearing a string of decorations on their ill-fitting dress-coats! She would have liked this name of Bovary, that was hers, to be famous, on view at the book-shops, always cropping up in the papers, known all over France. But Charles had no ambition.

Wilkie Collins, 1883, Heart and science

His restless hand unlocked a drawer, and took out a manuscript work on medicine of his own writing. “Surely,” he thought, “I may finish a chapter, before I go to sea tomorrow?”

Thomas Mann, 1924, The magic mountain

Famous European specialists, physicians, psychologists, and economists will share in the composition of this encyclopaedia of suffering, and the general editorial bureau at Lugano will act as the reservoir to collect all the articles which shall flow into it . . . This great work will not neglect the belletrist in so far as he deals with human suffering: a volume is projected which shall contain a compilation and brief analysis of such masterpieces of the world’s literature as come into question depicting one or other kind of conflict—for the consolation and instruction of the suffering.

G D Perkin Regional Neurosciences Centre, Charing Cross Hospital, Fulham Palace Road, London W6 8RF, UK
Doctors' writing, and writings.

G D Perkin

J Neurol Neurosurg Psychiatry 1996 61: 310
doi: 10.1136/jnnp.61.3.310

Updated information and services can be found at:
http://jnnp.bmj.com/content/61/3/310.citation

Email alerting service

Receive free email alerts when new articles cite this article. Sign up in the box at the top right corner of the online article.

Notes

To request permissions go to:
http://group.bmj.com/group/rights-licensing/permissions

To order reprints go to:
http://journals.bmj.com/cgi/reprintform

To subscribe to BMJ go to:
http://group.bmj.com/subscribe/